

THE POPULAR CULTURE STUDIES JOURNAL

VOLUME 6

NUMBER 1

2018

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

TIM BAVLNKA is currently a Ph.D. student at the University of Wisconsin–Milwaukee in the Media, Cinema, and Digital Studies program. His research interests include horror and the supernatural, extreme metal, professional wrestling, and internet histories and cultures. When not reading or watching wrestling, he works in the beer industry.

DAVID BEARD is associate professor of Rhetoric at the University of Minnesota Duluth. He received his Ph.D. in Rhetoric from the University of Minnesota. His research interests include rhetorical study of popular culture of all sorts.

JOE BELFEUIL has followed wrestling for nearly 30 years. When not watching the WWE, he watches Ring of Honor, New Japan Pro Wrestling, Pro Wrestling Guerrilla, and other independent wrestling federations.

GARRET L. CASTLEBERRY serves as Associate Professor and Program Director of Communication, Media, and Ethics at Mid-America Christian University. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma, and his scholarly training intersects areas of media studies, visual rhetoric, and semiotics. His writings are featured across academic journals, edited anthologies, and digital media publications, combining genre studies, autoethnography, and ideological criticism to explore the rhetorical work performed by televisual artifacts.

The Popular Culture Studies Journal, Vol. 6, No. 1
Copyright © 2018

KAREN CORTEEN is a Senior Lecturer in Criminal Justice at Liverpool John Moores University. Karen was awarded a Ph.D. from the University of Lancaster. She is co-editor of a series of Companion books concerned with criminology, victimology and criminal justice (Policy Press, 2014-2017).

MARIO A. DOZAL is Ph.D. candidate in Communication at the University of New Mexico in Albuquerque, New Mexico, and a Lecturer in the Department of Communication Studies at Manchester University in North Manchester, Indiana. His research focuses on issues of performance, representation, and identity politics in the media, with an emphasis on professional wrestling, sport, and fandom.

MATT FOY is an Assistant Professor of Communication at Upper Iowa University. He received his Ph.D. in Speech Communication from Southern Illinois University-Carbondale. His scholarship interweaves elements of rhetorical, cultural, and performance studies. His research interests include movie riffing and in-theater participation rituals, horror cinema, and professional wrestling.

PETER B. GREGG's research and scholarship focuses on media production, audiences, and media history. His work has been published in Communication Monographs, the Journal of Popular Culture, the Journal of Media Education, the Journal of Broadcasting and Electronic Media, Death Studies, and the Journal of Homosexuality. In 2017, he and his colleagues won the National Communication Association's Charles H. Woolbert Research Award for "scholarship that has stood the test of time and has become a stimulus for new conceptualizations of communication phenomena" for their work on the parasocial contact hypothesis.

JOHN HEPPEn is a Geography Professor at the University of Wisconsin at River Falls. He received his Ph.D. in geography from Louisiana State University. His research interests are in electoral geography in addition to professional wrestling and culture and politics.

JACK KARLIS is an Assistant Professor of Communication at Georgia College and State University. He received his Ph.D. from the University of South Carolina. Karlis specializes in the application of social media under the strategic communication paradigm. He has been a WWE fan since the 1980s and has attended nine Wrestlemanias since 2008, with his tenth coming up at Wrestlemania XXXIV.

EERO LAINE is an Assistant Professor of Theatre at the University at Buffalo, State University of New York. He holds a Ph.D. in Theatre from the Graduate Center of the City University of New York. He is one of the co-editors of Performance and Professional Wrestling (2017). He is currently editing Professional Wrestling: Politics and Populism and completing a monograph titled Professional Wrestling and the Commercial Stage.

THOMAS KLINTØ LAURSEN received his M.Sc. in Sports Science from Aarhus University, Denmark. His academic interests include exercise physiology, sports philosophy, and professional wrestling.

DAN MATHEWSON is Associate Professor of Religion at Wofford College. He received his Ph.D. in religious studies from Emory University, where he was also a Fellow at the Fox Center for Humanistic Inquiry. He specializes in religion and culture and has published articles and a monograph on such topics as American evangelicalism, religion and science, the Holocaust, the Left Behind novels, and, more recently, professional wrestling in the South. Dan wrestles as Mr. Canada, a masked French-Canadian heel; he has a career record of 1-2.

ALANNA R. MILLER is an assistant professor at Fayetteville State University. She primarily studies the intersection between mass media, religion and identity, but has written and studied various other forms of identity as well, such as gender and virtual identity.

RASMUS BYSTED MØLLER is Assistant Professor at the research group Sport and Body Culture, Section for Sport Science at the Department of Public Health, Århus University, Denmark. His research focuses particularly on philosophy and sport ethics. He is the author of several journal articles and book chapters, and is currently co-editing the book Lidenskab og livskvalitet gennem idræt (Passion and Well-being Through Sport) for Aarhus University Press.

GABRIELA I. MORALES is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Communication Studies at Manchester University in North Manchester, Indiana. She received her Ph.D. from the University of New Mexico. Her research focuses on health communication, with an emphasis on health disparities in minority populations, the use of media for health representations and health promotion, and entertainment-education.

CHRISTOPHER J. OLSON IS a Ph.D. student at the University of Wisconsin–Milwaukee. He is coeditor of Making Sense of Cinema: Empirical Studies into Film Spectators and Spectatorship (2016) and Heroes, Heroines, and Everything in Between: Challenging Gender and Sexuality Stereotypes in Children's Entertainment Media (2017). Christopher is also co-author of Possessed Women, Haunted States: Cultural Tensions in Exorcism Cinema (2016), and author of 100 Greatest Cult Films (2018).

JOHN QUINN currently serves as a Lecturer in Performance and Screen, as well as the teaching, learning and assessment coordinator for the School of Media, Culture and Society at the University of the West of Scotland. He holds a Ph.D. in narratology from the University of the West of Scotland.

CARRIELYNN D. REINHARD is an Associate Professor of Communication Arts and Sciences at Dominican University in Illinois. She received her Ph.D. in Communication from Ohio State University in 2008, and served as a post-doctoral researcher at Roskilde University. Her research focuses on digital communication technologies and audience and fan engagement. She has co-edited books on film spectatorship, gender and sexuality in children's media, and professional wrestling; she co-authored a book on exorcism cinema, and authored a monograph on fan studies.

J. H. ROBERTS is a Ph.D. student in English at the University of Georgia, and holds an M.A. in English from UGA. She specializes in medieval studies, gender studies, and popular culture. Her article "Don't Call Me White: Fashioning Sami Zayn's Arabic and Transnational Identity" appears in Critical Studies in Men's Fashion, and she has written for pro wrestling fanzines like The Atomic Elbow, Pro Wrestling Feelings, and Girl Wrestling Fan Will You Marry Me?, and for the website Uproxx. She is a member of the artist collective SouthEastern Women Wrestlers (SEWW) and trains at Landmark Arena under Azrael and Slim J.

CATHERINE SALMON is a Professor of Psychology at the University of Redlands in Southern California. She received her Ph.D. in Psychology from McMaster University in Canada. In addition to her long-term interest in professional wrestling, her research interests also include the effects of birth order on relationships, family dynamics, eating disordered behavior, pornography/erotica, and psychological approaches to popular culture.

MELISSA SARTORE earned her BA and MA in History from Western Illinois University in 2000 and 2002, respectively. She earned her PhD in Medieval History from the University of Wisconsin – Madison in 2010. Currently, she teaches history and geography in the Department of Creative Arts, English, and History at West Virginia University Institute of Technology in Montgomery, WV.

DOMINIC SEVIERI is a Ph.D. student at the University of Georgia. He completed an M.A. in English literature at the University of New Orleans. He specializes in early modern theater and poetry. Among other things, his academic interests include spatial rhetoric, new materialisms, and the human/animal divide.

CAROLINA SILVEIRA is a doctoral researcher at the University of the West of Scotland, and she holds a Master of Arts from Humboldt University. Her research primarily seeks to identify the ways in which ideas about “Scottishness” are constructed and reproduced through stand-up comedy.